

S.T.O.P. STOP THE TRANSMISSION OF HIV/AIDS THROUGH OUTREACH AND PREVENTION - KENTUCKIANA

PROGRAM OVERVIEW Volunteers of America's S.T.O.P. (Stop the Spread of HIV Through Outreach and Prevention) program provides HIV prevention, testing, and outreach in Kentucky counties surrounding Louisville and in Southern Indiana.

The S.T.O.P. program provides educational information and safer sex supplies and linkage to care to help prevent the spread of HIV. This unique, in-the-field approach includes case management services and one-on-one interaction with clients to lower their risk for the virus. S.T.O.P. also provides pre-test and post-test counseling and referrals to HIV-related and non-HIV related resources, including alcohol and drug assessments.

The S.T.O.P. program also works with local health departments, drug and alcohol treatment facilities and community centers to provide resources available within the communities. Through various partnerships such as Walgreens and the Council on Prevention and Education: Substances, Inc. (COPES), our team works to reduce the spread of HIV among Kentuckiana's most at-risk populations community as indentified by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention – by offering testing and educational resources at various locations in the community.
